Sharing responsibility to keep families safe

About

The North Shore Family Violence Prevention Network (FVPN) is an open collaborative of individuals and agencies that advocate for Family Violence Prevention initiatives within the wider North Shore Community. Members represent both NGO and Government organizations.

Vision

Thriving children and whanau in healthy safe relationships

Purpose

- ❑ Ensure that government and community agencies share resources, work together to reduce service fragmentation, and improve their capability to provide quality effective family violence services
- ❑ Facilitate an increased community understanding, ownership and leadership of family violence prevention, with improved efforts to change the attitudes and behaviours that perpetuate family violence
- ❑ Strengthen the network to become agents of social change. To engage with those outside the specialist family violence sector – the wider community, business, education and the health sector
- ❑ To recognize that multi-agency collaboration makes the best use of limited resources and thus aligns with increasing calls for social service provision to become more efficient by being more effective
- ❑ To provide a forum for identifying, promoting, monitoring and reviewing effective strategies for reducing and preventing family violence in the community

- ❑ To promote the coordination and collaboration of the community's response to family violence
- ❑ To improve and promote the safety of victims of family violence
- ❑ To promote an effective liaison between community service providers and statutory agencies, such as: Police, Ministry of Justice, Department of Courts, Child Youth and Family, Accident Compensation Corporation, and Health Service Providers
- ❑ To provide education and awareness of family violence issues through regular network and public seminars
- ❑ To act as a resource agency for obtaining, storing and providing information, educational programmes and services to the community on family violence issues
